

Taxation of the United Kingdom

The comments below are a general guide only, based on the tax law and practice in force as at the date of this document that may be subject to changes or revisions. They relate only to certain limited aspects of the tax position of United Kingdom (“UK”) resident shareholders of the Company. This section is not intended to be and should not be construed as legal or tax advice to any particular shareholder. If you are in any doubt as to your tax position you should consult an appropriate professional advisor.

Shareholders of the Company who are residents in the UK will generally be subject to UK income tax or corporation tax on the gross amount of dividends paid by the Company, but will normally be entitled to a credit against such UK income tax or corporation tax for any PRC withholding tax charged on the dividend.

It is also expected that, from 6 April 2008, an individual UK resident shareholder owning less than a 10% shareholding in the Company and receiving less than £5,000 of dividends in the relevant tax year from non UK-resident companies will be entitled to a non-payable tax credit in respect of dividends received from the Company similar to that currently given in respect of dividends received from UK resident companies. It should be noted that this measure, although announced, has yet to be legislated and therefore remains uncertain.

Under the current double taxation treaty between the PRC and the UK, shareholders of the Company who are resident in the UK will generally be entitled to a reduced rate of PRC withholding tax on dividends paid to them by the Company (details of which can be obtained from such shareholders’ respective UK tax offices).

Furthermore, corporate shareholders of the Company who are resident in the UK and who control (directly or indirectly) at least 10% of the voting rights of the Company will be entitled to credit against UK corporation tax chargeable in respect of dividends paid to them by the Company for any underlying PRC tax payable by the Company in respect of the profits out of which dividends were paid.