What is a mandatory call event? What happens if a mandatory call event occurs?

For bear contracts: A mandatory call event means the first occurrence on a business day during the mandatory call observation period whereby the spot level is equal to or greater than the call level.

For bull contracts: A mandatory call event means the first occurrence on a business day during the mandatory call observation period whereby the spot level is equal to or less than the call level.

Spot level means the spot level of the index as compiled and published by Hang Seng Indexes Company Limited.

The mandatory call observation period means the period from (and including) the mandatory call observation period start date to (and including) the mandatory call observation period end date.

Mandatory call observation period start date means 23 May 2012.

Mandatory call observation period end date means the business day immediately preceding the expiry date.

Upon the occurrence of a mandatory call event, the contracts will automatically be exercised on the mandatory call date and in respect of each series, every exercise amount will entitle the contractholder to receive the mandatory call payoff (if any) being an amount per exercise amount calculated by the issuer in accordance with the following formula:

For bear contracts: $[(\text{strike level} - \text{maximum index level}) \times \text{index currency amount}] - \text{expenses}$

For bull contracts: $[(\text{minimum index level} - \text{strike level}) \times \text{index currency amount}] - \text{expenses}$

Maximum index level means the maximum index level of the index during the period from the time of the occurrence of the mandatory call event up to the end of the next trading session for callable bull/bear contracts on Hong Kong indices as compiled by Hang Seng Indexes Company Limited on the stock exchange (subject to adjustments in accordance with the conditions).

Minimum index level means the minimum index level of the index during the period from the time of the occurrence of the mandatory call event up to the end of the next trading session for callable bull/bear contracts on Hong Kong indices as compiled by Hang Seng Indexes Company Limited on the stock exchange (subject to adjustments in accordance with the conditions).

If the mandatory call payoff is at or below zero, you will lose all your investment in the contracts.

How do we calculate the cash settlement amount following automatic exercise on the expiry date?

If no mandatory call event occurs during the mandatory call observation period, the contracts will automatically be exercised on the expiry date. You are not required to deliver any exercise notice and you will receive from the issuer the cash settlement amount (if any) per exercise amount in Hong Kong dollars calculated by the issuer as equal to:

For bear contracts: $[(\text{strike level} - \text{closing level}) \times \text{index currency amount}] - \text{expenses}$

For bull contracts: $[(\text{closing level} - \text{strike level}) \times \text{index currency amount}] - \text{expenses}$

The relevant closing level is the final settlement price for settling the relevant futures contracts determined pursuant to regulation 012 of the Regulations for Trading Stock Index Futures Contracts and the contract specification for the relevant futures contracts (as amended from time to time) published by the Hong Kong Futures Exchange Limited (or its successor or assign).

If the cash settlement amount is at or below zero, you will lose all your investment in the contracts.
