

SCIENCE AND ART

Imagine you're given a brush and asked to paint a ladybug. Where will you find the red for its shell? The black for its spots? Or the green for the leaf it is on? The answer is that you will need minerals, natural materials, chemicals and a scientist to create your palette - for art does not exist without science. Once you have painted your ladybug and want to share it, however, life is easier - you simply call us.
